Pre-mutiny (1857) Records of the Commissioner in Sind.

Subject.	Year.	Department.	File No. and page.
Abyssinian Expedition.
Letter of 21st September 1866 from Mr. Flad to Mr. Murray informing as under:—	1866—68	Political ...	193 (13—14)
In 1863 certain Abyssinian priests were removed from the Jerusalem convent. They complained to the King of Abyssinia that they had been expelled from their convent by Turks and when they sought protection from the British Consul he refused to interfere, stating that he had no authority from British Government to do so. This enraged the King, who subsequently imprisoned Consul Cameron and other Europeans. The British Government sent a mission under Mr. Rassom to the King of Abyssinia in connection with the release of Consul Cameron and his associates detained in Abyssinia. In February 1866 the King released all the captives and handed them over to Mr. Rassom with permission to take them out of the country.
Letter of August 1866 from Colonel Merewether, Resident of Aden—	Do. ...	Do. ...	193 (1—11)
In April 1866, in accordance with the King's permission both the parties, one under Consul Cameron and the other under Mr. Rassom left Karata. They were stopped on the next day, made prisoners again, and their property taken. The reason assigned for this treatment was that Mr. Rassom sent away the ex-prisoners without receiving a public pardon and dismissal from the King. This breach of etiquette was, only a pretext; the real cause of the change in the King's behaviour was, that a person named Bardel had excited suspicion in the mind of the King that directly Mr. Rassom and his friends were safe and out of the country, the British Government would resent the treatment Captain Cameron had received either by direct attack or by urging the Egyptian Government to advance against Abyssinia from that side. The King immediately had his fears aroused and determined on keeping all the Europeans until he obtained some guarantee or assurance that no retaliatory steps would be adopted against him. In order to get this assurance he sent Mr. Flad, one of the German missionaries, who had been in semi-confinement at Gaffot, with a letter to Her Majesty the Queen asking her to send him means and men who would develope the resources of his country, teach his people to utilise the valuable products which were to be found in it.	1866—68	Political ...	193 (1—11)

2. Letters (August 1866) from Colonel Merewether, Resident, Aden, to Lord Stanley, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and Sir Stafford Northcote making the following suggestions as to the best means for obtaining the release of Mr. Rassom and other British subjects detained in Abyssinia:—	1866—68	Do. ...	193 (1—11)
(a) that it would be inexpedient to take serious notice of the conduct of the King and that instead, the King's confidence might be won by supplying him with the means he referred to and that efforts be made to obtain the services of an enterprizing and well educated man who should proceed to Abyssinia and set up the machinery and teach some of the King's men the use of the machinery, &c. This Superintendent and his assistants and the articles which the King required should all accompany Mr. Flad on his return to Abyssinia.
(b) that the letters from King Theodorus to Her Majesty might be acknowledged and gratification shown at what the King had done in promptly handing over Captain Cameron and others to Mr. Rassom and regret might then be expressed that delay

Letter No. 61 of 16th February 1859, from Commissioner of Sind to Government of Bombay reporting that Gangaram had charge of finance of Meer Nuseer Khan of Kelat. He was suspected of malversation in office and was called upon to render his account He was on the point of dismissal from office when he with assistance of Darogah Gul Mohomed poisoned the Khan. They then assumed charge of affairs at Kelat and had control over the young Khan. Gangaram showed hostility to British Government when they were in difficulty in middle of 1857 and resisted to the best of his power General Jacob's efforts to put an end to the disorders in Kelat State. This led General Jacob to insist on his removal. He was paid up all that was due to him and he was allowed to live where he pleased in British India on condition that he would never attempt to interfere in the affairs of Kelat This promise he soon broke. He was detected trying to reopen a communication with some of Kelat Chiefs. He was consequently arrested and sent first to Karachi and then to Thana Jail.	1858—59	Political ...	8 (171—174)

3.—Kharan.
Early history of—
Letter, dated 23rd May 1840, from Lieutenant Loveday, Assistant Political Agent, Kelat, to Captain Bean; Political Agent Shawl, furnishing information regarding the district of Kharan and reporting that he had gleaned from conversation and traditional reports that Sardars of Kharan were vassals of Kelat. They performed military services for the Princes in Kech Mekran and in Cutch Gandava. They shook off their allegiance to Kelat during the troubled state of affairs in Afghanistan and Baluchistan; that Maheem Khan the first Kharan Sardar followed the standard of Meer Ahmed (the great ancestor of Shah Nawaz Khan from whom his family take their name of Ahmedzye) to Cutch Gandava and was slain in the battle with Barozeys at Pen Lukka; that Shadad the 2nd Sardar frequently attended on Mehrab Khan at Kelat; that Abas was the 3rd Sardar. He accompanied Abdullah Khan son of Mehrabkulan in his expeditions and served under him in the conquest of Bampoora. He continued to serve under Mehtab Khan eldest son of Abdullah and was with him at the celeberated interview with Nadirshah; that Jehangir was the 4th Sardar; that Abbas Sanee was 5th Sardar. He joined Mahmood son of Naseer Khan in the battle of "Dahuna Dadur" against Behramkhan, grandson of Mehrabkhan who endeavoured to recover the Musnud of Kelat. The Kharan Sardar Abbas Sanee rebelled against Mehrab Khan son of Mahmood. He was punished and Kharan was burnt. Abas fled to Bampoora and sought protection of his Sardar Mehrab Loung, the Chief of the Narobi tribe of Belochees. Mehrab Loung pointed out to him the folly of resisting Kelat authorities and advised him to make terms with the Chief. Abbas accepted his advice and went to Kelat and tendered his allegiance to Mehrab Khan who restored him to former position and conferred on him a dress of honour; that Azad Khan 6th Sardar and Chief of Kharan in 1840, joined Kandhar	1839-42 ... Sardars at Mustoong. Mehrab Khan advanced to meet them but eventually they were reconciled and Azad Khan returned to Kelat; On the occasion of the expedition of His Majesty Shah Shuja-ul-Moolk in 1834 to Kandhar, Mehrab Khan offered assistance and he summoned Azad Khan to Kelat for this purpose. In 1839, Mehrab Khan made a friendly treaty with British Government and as he no longer required the services of Azad Khan he appointed him Governor of Panjgoor.
4.—Khyberees Tribe.

They were driven out by the predatory Baluchee tribes—Doomkis and Jakhranees—who kept the whole of the Frontier in state of disorder and ultimately refused to acknowledge authority of Khan of Kelat. When Khan of Kelat expressed his inability to control these tribes, Sir Charles Napier, Governor of Sind, sent an expedition against them and after routing them secured the peace of British Frontier by setting a friendly tribe of Khyberees in Cutch border; Letter No. 174 of 26th January 1848 from Commissioner in Sind directing that the principle which should regulate Government policy should be to abstain from any interference in the internal feuds of the tribes beyond the British Frontier in their relations with their Sovereign the Khan of Kelat; letter No. 175 of 26th January 1848 from Commissioner in Sind to Government forwarding copy of the above; Letter No. 572 of 7th February 1848 from Government of Bombay disagreeing with Commissioner in his decision regarding Frontier policy and appointing General Jacob as Political Superintendent as well as Commandant on Sind Frontier; letter from Commissioner in Sind to Khan of Kelat informing him of the Government orders and equesting him to refer all cases to General acob in future.	1845 ... Passing of—from the hands of Afghan Kings of Khorasan to those of Talpoors.
Letter No. 32 of 14th November 1847 from Collector of Shikarpur to Secretary to Government of Sind forwarding the following memorandum relating to—	1847—48	Political ..	219 (86—109)
At the time of invasion of Nadirshah (1732) Upper Sind Frontier formed part of the Sooba of Mooltan and on the dismemberment of Empire of Delhi the portion termed "Moghuly" comprising Sukkur, Bukkur and Shikarpur, was annexed to Doorani Kingdom founded by Ahmedshah Abdally, an officer of Nadirshah. Upto 1809, the Afghan possession extended towards North-East to Kashmore; to Rojan in North; to Naushahro Abro in West; and Mandeji in Larkana to South. In this year the Talpoor Meers of Sind took advantage of the destracted State of the Doorani Empire. Meer Sohrabkhan of Khairpur got, partly by intimidation and partly by corrupting the Afghan Governor (Badal Khan Mohomed Razakhan), dependencies of Chuck and Mohomed Bagh near Shikarpur. He then surprised Sukkur and Bukkur Fort, landing with his people on pretence of paying his devotion at shrine of Shah Khyrood Din, latter known as "Tiger Mosque." Subsequently Shikarpur was surprised by one Walli Mohomed Laghari, Wazir of the Meers of Hyderabad. From that day the Dooranees ceased to exercise any authority in Sind. But traces of the old Afghan ascendency yet remain in some Pathan families thickly settled in neighbourhood of Shikarpur. Here they still possess some privileges, such as reduced rents and Pattedari. When Shah Shuja-ul-Moolk was firmly seated at Kandhar the Talpur Meers presented to his officer Rs. 27 lakhs. In 1831 when Shah Shuja-ul-Moolk remained at Ludhiana as a refugee of British Government, Meer Muradali of Hyderabad invited him to Shikarpur promising to restore him the moghuly district and some pecuniary assistance. In 1832 Meer Muradali died and Meers Roostam and Mubarik called upon Shah Shuja to quit Shikarpur or they would compel him to do so by force of arms. They accordingly attacked him at Sukkur but the Meers were repulsed. Shah Shuja then insisted the cession of Mughuly and the pecuniary assistance promised by Meer Muradali. The Hyderabad Meers in the name of the Talpurs replied that if Shah proceeded towards Kandhar they would pay him Rs. 3 lakhs and if he succeeded in establishing himself at Kandhar they would restore to him all his former possession in Sind. As the expedition of Shah Shuja terminated disastrously the cession of the territory promised was never made good.
